

LARRY FREEMAN, president of the California Newspaper Publishers Association (co-sponsors of the Exposition) tells George A. Scott, president of the San Diego City and County Centennial Commission, that he has done a truly historic piece of work in presenting the Centennial Exposition of California Journalism as the main feature of the San Diego—California Centennial Celebration. To the right of the old press in the scene of the office of publication of the first newspaper in California, THE CALIFORNIAN, stands Joseph R. Knowland, Oakland publisher and chairman of the California Centennial Commission. The entire Celebration including the Library of Congress California Exhibit, and the Exhibit of Historic Art will be open free to the public through September 9.
